His Petunias were also attractive; so also were the Fuchsias, and especially Montrose with a very narrow red tube, and large double white corolla. For rare and lovely plants, the collection of Robert BuiBt is always sought. Here we believe for the first time in Philadelphia, Begonia Boliviensis was exhibited. The leaves are all right, but the pretty pink flowers are unlike the common styles of Begonias. In Ericas, usually so hard to grow well in our summer climate, he had a good representative in one labeled Westphelegi. He had also a very pretty plant of the old, but very rarely seen, Mussrendafron dosa. This has yellow flowers, in shape like a short and thick Manettaor Bouvardia which are surrounded by large white bracts, similar to the dark red ones in Poinxetta. He had also...
