Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .they are taken into the repairing room for the purpose of being sealed up, when they again enter the store and are placed on the racks kept for tested meters, which are preferably those near the office. Meters as required can then be taken from the tested racks, in the order in which they have been tested, and sent out on circuit. Wiring.--The system of wiring of the test rooms depends upon several things, such as the type of meters employed, the output of meters required, the nature of the supply current, and the pressure at which it is decided to supply the main current for testing. In all probability both watt-hour and ampere-hour meters are used. In alternating-current work provision for the testing of watt-hour meters is sure to be necessary. In order that connections suitable for various tests may be made quickly, a connection board will be found a necessity. Such a board should be well made, as it will be in constant use. Mercury-connection boards --i.e., blocks of wood covered with mercury wells, and in which combinations of connections are made by dipping I-shaped pieces of copper into various wells--should be strictly avoided. Mercury can never be kept in its place. A testing-circuit board designed by the Author, which has seen some years service, is shown in Fig. 147 and diagram Fig. 147.--Testing Circuits Board. matically in Fig. 148. As will be seen, it is entirely a plug board, the circuits being broken by...
