1st Book Library. Hardcover. Condition: New. 468 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.2in. Synopsis Ben Hawthorne, self-exiled to an absent friends crumbling Greenwich Village apartment, attempts to write down the events of his last month in Los Angeles. He is desperate to understand why he pushed Mark Victor off the balustrade of his Wilshire Corridor penthouse terrace. What, in Gods name, possessed an easy-going, ethical WASP to murder his oldest friend, who happened to be a Jew While Bens claim that Mark accidentally fell -they were both drunk -is readily accepted by the police and public, he knows otherwise. Ben and Mark met at college. During the ensuing thirty years, they stayed in touch, but had gone dramatically different ways. They were each others oldest, not best, friend. That is, until the past year, 1992, when Mark chose to enter Bens world. By now, Mark had become one of the countrys foremost financierentrepreneurs, with a Time Magazine cover to his credit for effecting the major mergers of the Eighties. Ben, by now, was considered a world class motion picture director, with hit films and an Oscar nomination attesting to his success. Four years prior to killing Mark, however, Ben suffered two shattering setbacks: His agent of two decades, who had shielded him from most of the harsh truths of the business, died from a stroke. Only weeks later, an IRS agent informed Ben that his business manager, also of twenty years, was a compulsive gambler who had disappeared, leaving his clientele bereft of all assets, including pension investments. Suddenly, at forty-eight, Ben had to cope alone in a hostile environment, with no production prospects and his several million, gone. Does Mark know any of this when he offers to finance The Cry of Sirens, from a controversial script Ben...
