Test the so-called leaders of the past by the test of The Mind That Interprets. Test those who you think have capacity for leadership. Test yourself. Chapter Six THE PRACTICE THAT PREPARES Many a youth of talent, with qualities that promised leadership in various lines of endeavor, has been lost to the world because he had never seen for himself and had never been shown by others the part that practice plays in the preparation for moments that demand leaders. When one hears the almost perfect interpretation of some great selection in oratorio or opera, when he sits enthralled by the sympathetic rendition of a great master s dreams in pure, sweet, unerring tones of a violin or the soft, intoxicating chords of...
