By Anne Marie Parker

Strategic Book Publishing. Paperback. Condition: New. 250 pages. Dimensions: 8.9in. x 5.9in. x 0.2in. Faced with the prospect of auction to a dangerous man for marriage, Lady Elizabeth DeVanes only choice is to flee. Booking passage a ship bound for the American colonies, she leaves England, only to quickly discover the hardships of a transatlantic crossing. Arriving in America Lady Elizabeth searches for a place to start fresh. Yet just as things are finally looking up, the rogue son of a tribal leader known as Chief Elkhorn attacks her stagecoach. Unconscious and barely breathing, Lady Elizabeth is rescued by a horse breeder named Landon Winters. Landon and his staff nurse her back to health and realizing he wants her to stay, he offers her a position on his ranch after her convalescence. Thrown together on a daily basis, passionate feelings soon develop between them. Struggling with her new feelings and many questions, Lady Elizabeth determines to fully embrace her new life and transforms herself from proper English lady to frontierswoman by adopting the name Angel Van Morrison. Empowered by her new identity, Angel vows to be true to herself and finds peace for the first time in her life. Yet beneath...
