Pearson Education (US), United States, 2003. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book presents the approaches and practices for the construction of software systems using Select Perspective. It details the key workflows for a contemporary approach to supplying, managing, and consuming software assets to deliver business IT systems. This book provides a comprehensive development lifecycle (Select Perspective) for component and web service based IT solutions, that supports parallel development activities, to reduce time-to-market. It introduces the Select Perspective as a Supply, Manage, Consume software development process. It provides a real world project experience and examples. Technology: Unlike other development processes, Select Perspective is focused on a small number of key deliverables within an organizational framework of suppliers and consumers, of solution driven components. Audience: For CIOs, IT Directors, Project Managers, and solution developers. Level: Intermediate. Hedley Apperly is Vice President, Product Marketing and Development with Aonix. Hedley has graduate and post-graduate qualifications in production engineering, business computing and strategic marketing. His 19 years experience in IT, have focused on the design and development of relational, object-oriented and component-based systems. He is also a committee member of the British Computer Societies (BCS), Object-Oriented Programming and Systems (OOPS) specialist group. As well as his involvement Component Based Development for Enterprise Systems, published by Cambridge University Press, Hedley co-authored Component Based Software Engineering; Putting the Pieces Together, published by Addison Wesley. Ralph Hofman works in Manager Services (Benelux) at Aonix. Ralph studied computer science at the University of Twente in the Netherlands. He started as a freelance consultant for different companies and specialized in methods and tools for system development. Ralph initiated component-based development as a way of working within a major international Bank. He joined Aonix in 2000, where he is responsible for the consultancy and services in the Benelux....
