Excerpt: .by the name of Giorgione, from a certain grandeur conferred upon him by nature, no less of mind than form, and which appears also impressed upon his productions; despising the minuteness of art used in the school of Bellini, he adopted a freedom and audacity peculiarly his own, and till then unknown, as no artist before his time had acquired that mastery of the pencil, so bold and determined in manner, and producing such effect. He died of the plague. Antonio Da Correggio, so named from the place of his birth, was born in the dukedom of Modena, 1472; died 1512, aged forty; he painted history and portraits. It is remarkable that the life of a man so eminent should be involved in so much obscurity as to admit, beyond that of any other artist, of fresh discussion. The notices of him by the...
