Recommended for readers 17. Natasha is one of the most promising ballet dancers at the prestigious Fenbrook Academy of Performing Arts and she's just landed a life-changing audition. But no one knows the guilt she carries. . . or the damage it makes her inflict on herself when she's alone. Darrell is a multi-millionaire designer at 25. But past traumas have pushed him into isolation and the intense pressure of his work has brought him to the edge of burnout. Seeking inspiration, he sees Natasha dance and hires her as his muse. As she dances for him, the two become entwined in a passionate but troubled relationship. He starts to see the pain inside her and helps her gradually lower her defenses. . . but Darrell has demons of his own. Can two broken people save each other Or will the darkness they're hiding consume them both? An extract. . . I realized I was only an arms length from him. My last few steps had taken me forward, and normally I would have been near the front of the stage, staring out into the blackness. But here, in this underground room, it put me right up close to him. We locked eyes, and I was breathing harder than I should have been. I sank down into a grand pli, and instead of just watching he crouched, his movements so harsh and cumbersome compared to my own, like watching a giant made of stone. He settled there, huge and hulking, and we stared at each other. I rose, turned, feeling his eyes burning into my back. I pushed off into a pas de chat, airborne for just...
