Defense, with the government of Afghanistan, has established programs for U. S. Training of Afghan recruiting and training battalions of Afghan combat troops. OMC-A Combat Troops Has significantly accelerated Afghan combat troop training in 2004, and over 42 percent of the armys total projected combat strength of 43, 000 soldiers Outpaced Efforts to was deployed throughout the country. However, OMC-As efforts to fully Equip and Sustain equip the increasing number of combat troops have fallen behind. In Them addition, OMC-As efforts to establish the institutions needed to support these troops have not kept pace, and plans for their completion are not clear. Despite some shortcomings, OMC-A personnel and the embedded trainers we met with told us that Afghan combat troops have generally performed well under U. S. supervision. Defense, in conjunction with the government of Afghanistan, is establishing The United States Has recruiting stations in each of Afghanistans 34 provinces. To help ensure Established Recruiting that the army is ethnically balanced, Defense attempts to form new Effort 6 battalions for training with volunteers drawn from Afghanistans major 7 ethnic groups. Information provided by OMC-A indicates that the army as 8 a whole generally reflects the countrys balance of major ethnic groups. While many of those initially recruited left the army before competing their terms, by late 2004 the armys attrition rate had dropped to 1. 1 percent per 9 month. While attrition appears to have abated, U. S. and Afghan officials told us that soldiers often leave their units without permission for as long as 2 weeks to take...
