Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .See ante 3, note 11. it, left it with his clerk to draw the money at the time specified. Changing the date, he drew the money and departed. The bank contended that had the clerk not changed the date, but waited until the proper time, and then drawn the money, the depositor would have had no claim against the bank. The court readily admitted this claim, but, on the other hand, the clerk did otherwise, and the bank wrongfully paid the altered check. The bank is from necessity responsible for any omission to discover the original terms and conditions of a check, once properly drawn upon it, because at the time of payment it is the only party interested in protecting its integrity, who has the opportunity of inspection, and it therefore owes the duty to its depositors. 14 5. Duty of Drawee of Check Payable to Bearer or Endorsed in Blank. A check drawn payable to bearer, or endorsed in blank, somewhat lessens the burden borne by the drawee, because the bank ordinarily is protected in paying such a check to the bearer and charging the amount to the account of the depositor.15 In like manner on a bona fide note or bill, which the maker has put into circulation with a forged endorsement, the holder may recover as upon a note payable to bearer.18 And the same rule has been applied to a payee who had no interest in a note, and who, it...
