FBC LTD, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Improvement Era, Vol. 11: Organ of the Seventies and the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Associations; February, 1908 You have read Moore s Meeting of the Waters? If not, then do so, for it is one of that much neglected poet s most pleasing descriptive, sentimental productions; dear, I am sure, to every soul who has visited the Sweet Vale of Avoca, at the point where the clear streams of Avon and Avoca meet, between Rash drum and Arklow, in the County of Wicklow, Ireland. It is twenty years since the writer stood upon the hill that overlooks the scene of Moore s poem, and in silence acquiesced in the charms of the spot, celebrated by the Irish poet; though, unlike the poet, the writer was alone at the time, and the added charm of friendly companionship was not there to increase the interest that nature had shed over the scene; so that, in his case, it was nature s soft magic of streamlet and hill that constituted the vale s chief charms. The writer was reminded of this twenty-year-ago visit to the vale of Avoca, with its meeting of the waters as he recently stood under the shadow of Washington Heights, near Pittsburgh, and saw a mightier Meeting of the Waters than would be possible in Ireland, since it was an American meeting of rivers, and not an Irish meeting of brooks.
