SUMMER DAYS IN POGANUC. JO passed Dolly's Fourth of July; a confused dream of glory and patriotism, of wonderful sights and surprises--but, like a dream, it all melted away. New England life was too practical and laborious to give more than one day to holiday performances, and with the night of the Fourth the whole pageant vanished. Hiel's uniform, with its gold lace and feathers, returned to the obscurity of Mother Jones's pillow-cases and camphorgum, and was locked away in secret places; and Hiel was only a simple stage-driver, going forth on his route as aforesaid. So with the trappings of the Poganuc Rangers--who the day before had glittered like so many knights-errant in the front of battle--all were laid by in silent waiting, and the Poganuc Rangers rose at four o'clock and put on their working clothes and cow-hide shoes, and were abroad with their oxen. The shoemaker and the carpenter, who yesterday were transfigured in blue and gold, to-day were hammering shoe-soles and planing boards as if no such thing had happened. In the shadows of the night the cannon had vanished from the village green and gone where it came from; the flag on the Court-house was furled, and the world of Poganuc Center was again the same busy, literal, work-a-day world as ever. Only Liph Kingsbury, who had burned his hand with gunpowder in consequence of carrying too much New England rum in his head, and one or...
