Excerpt from The Pleasures of Benevolence: A Poem Mary, to thee, these lines I consecrate. E en as a votive ofering at the shrine Of that Benevolence whose joys I sing For thou hast proved them - thou hast hailed her power, Wide as it spreads thro being s mighty range. And thou hast tuned thy soul, in sweet response, To Nature s harmonies - as her s thy love To all the living tribes - as her s thy joy To see all happy. Thou an infant minds Hast rayed th eflisglence of celestial light, And bade them see. And reverent adore The great Creator s glory, as it beams, Radiant with life and love, thro earth and heaven Host taught them too, in Inspiration s page To see, and love the beautiful, the grand, Of moral Truth, to learn her sacred lore, And dearly prize it as the pearl of price, The balm of bliss, the talisman of peace, And man s immortal hope. And thou hast shewn, In deeds of mercy, how that lore divine Warms thy own spirit, as...
