Excerpt: .from the illustrations for a Bible to the cuts of a primer and spellingbook. His lights and shades were strongly marked, and he worked with precision and effect. The collection of specimens of his thousands of engravings in his scrap-books is a pleasing and curious exhibition of the resources of booksellers in the last generation. There is a notice of Anderson in Dunlap s Arts of Design, il. p. S, and his friend, Mr. Benson J. Lossing, j has recently paid him a handsome tribute in an article in the Home Journal. t The tavern has lately been repaired, and is now (1854) occupied as a private dwelling by Mr. Pittman, a dentist. To this account of Freneau, we are enabled to add a notice of his brother, who was settled in South Carolina, at Charleston, from the pen of Dr. Joseph Johnson, of...
