Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Ages 10-adult To most people, Wisconsin s Door County doesn t go beyond the peninsula. Did you know, though, that the Door in Door County comes from the narrow water passage called Death s Door? Grandpa Mike explains how the open waters of Lake Michigan to the east and Green Bay to the west crash into each other here. Stormy weather makes this stretch of water particularly dangerous. Seven-year-old Mallory searches in vain for a floating door in the water as the ferry makes its way to Washington Island. His twin sister Melody is more interested in islands. It s early evening when the Maloney family arrives at the inn where they ll be staying on the Island. Perch is the dinner special, and the twins Dad suggests they order the perch prepared five different ways to share with each other. They learn from Mr. Tom, the inn s owner, that Schoolhouse Beach is only one of five beaches in the whole world that doesn t have any sand. The twins think, What good is a beach without sand? Mr. Tom senses their disappointment and explains that you can build castles out of the smooth rocks; their flat surfaces also make great skipping over water. During dinner, the twins figure out the farthest you can be from water if you walk a straight line from wherever you are on Washington Island. New friends are formed the next day at Schoolhouse Beach. The four boys and two sets of parents are regular visitors to Washington Island. Mallory and Melody practice skipping stones and explore a stone city with the boys while their parents get acquainted. The group decides to visit Little Lake. It...
