Forgotten Books, 2017. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Omegan, Vol. 2: Theta Upsilon Omega; October, 1925 Many people in America have heard of the Taj Mahal, but few really know what it is. If built today, it would cost more than the amount spent by the United States on the Panama Canal. The gold used in its construction amounted to about all that the world produced during the construction period of seventeen years. The in laid diamonds, pearls and other precious stones, under present day valuation, are worth a huge fortune. The virgin marble, so pure and white, after passing through nearly three hundred monsoons, or rainy seasons, and resisting the terrific heat of the sun for the balance of each year, stands as a wonderful example of the care taken in the selection of the stone. The Taj is one of the big show places of the world, and is emblematic of the architectural age begun by King Akbar and followed up by his descendants during the Mogul occupation of India in the seventeenth century. Situated on the bank of the Jumna river just outside the city of Agra, and not far from Delhi, the medieval and present capital Of the country, its massive yet delicate form of snowy whiteness rises to a height of over two hundred feet. It rests upon a checker board platform, three hundred feet square of black and white marble slabs. At each corner rises a sentinel tower or minaret Of similar construction one hundred forty feet high. On either side and parallel to the river bank are two sandstone buildings, the one on the east the J amat Khana, and on the west the Imperial Mosque. They are similar...
