Createspace. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 150 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.3in. A superbly dark, funny and entertaining romp through the universe with the last survivor of a viral epidemic as our guide and an un-named virus as our narrator. This story begins with the Munich Virus, which wipes out every known population of humanity across the universe, leaving Kego, our schizophrenic nine year old navigator, to fend for himself and return to Earth with the Frozen, those who were lucky enough to be in stasis when the virus struck. We follow Kego on his journey through the cosmos as he steers the Solstice back to Earth to re-establish the human race. Narrated by an unknown and un-named virus of indefinite age, wisdom and sarcasm who gives his somewhat unusual yet strangely enlightening views on Kegos, and ultimately humanity's journey, as obstacles are met, faced and hurdled, this is more than just a story. It is a romp through the history of mankind as viewed by one who has not been subject to civilised influences and has gained his knowledge through The History itself and by another who was there as an outsider looking in....
