

The Light-Skin Trigger

By Clarence Eugene Freeman

Xlibris Corporation. Paperback. Condition: New. 224 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.5in. President Ronald Reagan has been quoted as saying, There's no discrimination in America. How would he know, being a white male of privilege whose feet never, figuratively, touched the ground without others running ahead of him to lay down a red carpet and being accompanied by gun-toting bodyguards who shield him from the realities of everyday life, especially from likes of the experiences alleged by a twenty-year-old black woman in Charleston, West Virginia. Reported in the daily paper of October 24, 2007, she says she was kidnapped by a group of white men and women and held captive in a shedbeaten; tortured; raped; forced to eat feces from humans, dogs, and rats; and stabbed three times in her thigh, which photos of her wounds were shown in the picture, all the while being tormented with racial slurs in addition to being forced, on pain of death, to perform sex acts on white men. Excuse me, but wasn't West Virginia formed from the western part of Virginia, which refused to secede from the Union and join the Confederacy? If you all want to remain in the Union, you have...
