Astronomy in the Carnegie Institution. --In Science for January 30th, President Daniel C. Gilman, of the Carnegie Institution, publishes a detailed account of the proceedings of the Institution during the first year of its existence. From this account we extract such information as is of especial interest to astronomers. In order to determine what work should be entered upon by the Institution, an advisory committee was appointed in each of eighteen sciences; that for astronomy is made up of E. C. Pickering (Harvard), Lewis Boss (Albany), George E. Hale (Yerkes Observatory), S. P. Langley (Smithsonian Institution), and Simon Newcomb. Some other names well known in astronomy are to be found among the other committees: Ormond Stone (Mathematics), R. S. Woodward, and A. A. Michelson (Physics), T. C. Chamberlain (Geology) and Cleveland Abbe (Meteorology). At its meeting in November, 1902, the Board of Trustees...
