If that ere ain t a boat, Cap n Eph, I ll agree to eat this buff-skin, an wash it down with a pint of Uncle Sam s best oil, and Mr. Samuel Peters, first assistant of Carys Ledge light, flattened his nose against the glass of the lantern as he peered out over the surging waters which surrounded the light-house on every hand. An odd-looking man was Mr. Peters (better known to his companions in the service as Sammy ), because of the fact that a bullet from the works of Petersburg had ploughed a deep furrow across his left cheek, and carried away a goodly portion of one ear.
