Grave Distractions Publications, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Hippocrates Wept takes place in an alternate but not unimaginable post-September 11th world. Wall Street has crashed and HMOs have gone bankrupt. Congress and the President enact a universal healthcare system managed by the federal government. Under the National Health Security Act, hospitals and clinics become the property of the bureaucracy. Medical professionals, now salaried employees of the government, labor under strict diagnostic and treatment regulations set forth by Washington, and citizens are assigned specific physicians. Doctors breaching those mandated doctor-patient lists can be charged with a felony punishable by fines and up to five years in prison. A vocal opponent of the government's draconian healthcare policies, Dr. Ted O Hara performs an emergency surgery for an abdominal aortic aneurysm on Joe Hanway, a friend who had saved his life in the Vietnam War. Hanway is not on Ted's assigned list of patients. Aiming to quell swelling defiance of Washington's edicts by doctors across the land, the Attorney General seeks to make an example of Dr. O Hara, charging him with the crime of treating a patient without authorization. Thus begins a gripping drama. With the action shifting from the operating room to the court room, Dr. O Hara seeks to clear his name and challenge the system that would brand doctors as criminals. The case leads to remarkable twists and turns in the lives of Dr. O Hara and his attorney, whose defense strategy hinges intriguingly on a pre-Civil War case of conscientious objection to the federal Fugitive Slave Law. Legal risks are the least of their worries, however, as the trial sparks a politically charged battle over government regulation of free enterprise - a battle that...
