Furthermore, with a fable illustrates that we should appreciate the food at our disposal, and shows other concepts that can positively affect the education of our children. The book tells the story of Pepin, a boy who loved birds; He wanted to be like them, fly over the green carpet formed by the treetops, and have birds as friends, and to live with them. He climbed into the trees and spent long hours standing on a branch imitating trills; he thought that he should have a nest and in his favorite branch with grass and branches he was built one. There; He liked to spend many hours loved to see how the other birds were approaching his nest, and said that they were his brothers and bigger ones, his parents. One day, he wanted so much to be a bird that by a strange spell. He became a bird, but it was a strange bird because it did not...
