She tries to get confused in the fog of London and expresses her emotions only through dance. I m fickle, tied to a life that doesn t exist any more: true love, perfect life, good friends. Everything is so damned difficult for me! Like a never-ending dance where the choreographer is never satisfied! And if life were an eternal dance? Would you dance with your eyes closed? On her seventeenth birthday, on a windy spring day, Anna meets Romeo, his smile, his voice, and she wakes up. But in a play of silence and destiny, their roads divide, and Anna loses her equilibrium yet again. Will any type of melody unite them again? Or is Stuart her true love? Will dancing save her?.
