The author's aim in the present work is to create, or rather to reconstruct, from the plays, Ibsen's mental struggles and development; and our interest in this reconstruction is increased by the knowledge that Ibsen himself came to the conclusion that the only hope for the future lay in the development of individual character. To thus reconstruct the mental development of an author would appear no easy task, and we must admit, considering that Mr. Lavrin is one of the pioneers of this special kind of criticism, that his success is no mean achievement. Starting with some general remarks on the relation of the artist to the ideas of his era, he proceeds to show how this was especially the case with Ibsen, who more than any other writer has so filled his plays with ideas; but with Ibsen ideas were only the raw material of art, for he was as much artist as philosopher, and as Mr. Lavrin says, in an admirable...
