Excerpt from Marketing Activities, Vol. 6: March 1943 The manufacturers of synthetic vitamins have done an amazing war time job in a Short time, but there are limits to what they can do. Raw supplies and new manufacturing equipment are limited in some instances. The total number of firms in the vitamin industry is small. A recent directory lists 26 firms selling vitamin A, 12 vitamin B1, 23 vitamin C, and so on. However, many of these are fabricators and wholesalers of vitamin tablets and other preparations, not basic manufacturers. The most recently published Government report on basic manufacturers lists only three producing vitamin C, for instance, and only two making sorbi tol, the important link in the chain of its composition. Best estimates are that U. S. Supplies of vitamins A and D will be adequate for all purposes during 1943; vitamin B; and niacin reason= ably so. Wartime needs for vitamin C and riboflavin have increased so rapidly that it is difficult to estimate what the future supply situa tion will be, but steps have recently been taken for further increases in production. As the war continues, probably more of the supplies avail able to civilians will be used to fortify other foodstuffs. Mixing vita min concentrates with foods eaten by all classes of people, including the low income groups, is our best guarantee of equitable and efficient distribution of available supplies.
