Excerpt: . . . designed adequately, then payments may be too low for certain groups of 37 beneficiaries. Further, providers could respond to these inadequate payments by choosing not to treat or inappropriately limiting care for these groups, which could adversely affect these beneficiaries access to 8, 3 39 and quality of care. We and others have noted that underpaying for care, which could result from an inadequate case-mix adjustment, may 40 result in care of poor quality. In particular, poor quality of care could occur under bundled payment systems if, for example, providers furnish inadequate doses of drugs in an effort to minimize cost. Beneficiaries with above average costs of care may be particularly vulnerable because providers who treat these beneficiaries face the potential of financial losses on these patients if the bundled payments are not adjusted appropriately to take these above average costs into account. The potential unintended effects of bundled payment systems on beneficiaries have led us and others to note that access to and quality 37 For example, see GAO, Medicare Home Health Care: Prospective Payment System Will Need Refinement as Data Become Available, GAO HEHS-00-9 (Washington, D.
