Excerpt from The Irish-Office-Hunter-Oniad: A Heroic Epic I know that nine tenths of the whole bulk of native Americans, and nineteen twentieths of the reflecting and respectable portion of our Irish citizens, adopted or otherwise, are strongly opposed to the present headlong system of office hunting on the part of the latter; because while it cheats the one out of their national and natural rights, it entails a great deal of disgrace, calumny, and trouble upon the others; but nevertheless, I go heart and hand with that portion of the community whose motto is, Down with the native or the gentleman, and let the stranger or the bog-trotter take their places. And I do this upon principle. If I am a native, I do it because the Bible commands me to be hospitable to strangers.
