CHAPTER XLIX RESULTS OF THE WORLD WAR I. The Peace Treaties 592. Scope of the War. -- The time will doubtless come when the German people will see what all the rest of the world knows, namely, that the World War was made in Germany and that it came through no necessity, but solely through selfish ambition, not of the whole people, but of an aristocratic military class that dominated the empire. Germany might have won, without war, in a few more decades, almost all that she aspired to. She had made marvelous progress in manufacturing and science; her goods were sold and eagerly bought the world around; she had great possessions in Africa and concessions in Turkey; she might have eventually absorbed Holland and even the Austrian Empire; she had in forty years won a wonderful standing among the powers of the...
