A This gives it greater opportunity, for under the new plan the work can be continued during the entire year, instead of for the summer only, as heretofore. In Maeterlinck s Life of the Bee, upon which our sym bolism is founded, he refers to an invisible something which moves each bee to do its work - some to build the comb, some to gather propolis with which to strengthen the cell walls, one to become the mother of the hive, others to fan the brood cells, others to clean the hive, still others to gather honey. This invisible something he calls the Spirit of the Hive. So we have taken the things which daily move us to action, and which, rightly done, will develop womanhood; these we have embodied in The Spirit of the Hive. Every girl who will adopt this law unto herself and let it prompt her actions will find strength in time of need, will have her eyes opened to the beauty about her, and will find in her daily routine - Joy.
