He was not only a hero, but a hero with whom intimacy was at once an honour and an advantage. Lady Portishams bequest included a charming estate in Hertfordshire, valued at 6000 a-year, exclusive of plate and pictures, and a considerable amount of personal property, represented by Government stocks and other investments of undoubted security. Also there was a town house in Moray Place, Edinburgh, which had been an heirloom for many generations in the family, and which was rich in art treasures and decorative furniture. It was here the poor lady had made her incomprehensible will and drawn her last breath. About the PublisherForgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
