The Election of President Lincoln. On the sixth day of November, 1860, Abraham Lincoln was elected President of the United States. For the fifteen years preceding, the country had been in a state of constant agitation respecting the question of the extension of slavery. The Mexican War, the admission of Texas, the admission of California, the Repeal of the Missouri Compromise, the conflict in Kansas and Nebraska, the Dred Scott Decision were all phases of a struggle which had been growing more intense and bitter and which had awakened painful forebodings in all patriotic hearts. The South had grown bold and aggressive. It was determined to maintain an equal representation in the senate with the North. This would be impossible without the admission of more slave states. On the other hand the idea that the ownership of one man by another was a moral wrong, that it brought degradation to both master and slave and that therefore the system which was identified with the spread of these evils must be curbed, cabined, and confined, had been taking a deeper hold of the public conscience in the North. Hence men talked of an irrepressible conflict. The national outcome was the formation of the Republican party in 1856, whose cardinal principle was opposition to the extension of slavery in the territories. On this issue Mr. Lincoln had won an election to the senate of the United States after a most exciting contest...
