CHAPTER V. ON DESPISING THE SUGGESTIONS OF THE DEVIL. The devil cares very little to make us commit faults, or to fill us with vain fears, as long as he can turn us away from good. Use his own weapons in order to conquer him. It is by lassitude he often wishes to ruin us: then do not fight him, but despise him; not by giving yourself to his suggestions, but by detaching yourself from them, and by not disquieting yourself about what is involuntary; throwing yourself upon the Heart of your God, as a child runs into his mother s arms at sight of a hideous serpent. Let us keep very close to God: He should be our only object, and we must be careful not to stop short of Him by attachment to creatures. When some black cat of...
