

My Florida

By Kathleen Tyler

The Backwaters Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 72 pages. Dimensions: 8.9in. x 5.9in. x 0.4in. Kathleen Tyler's Florida is a wild and terrifying place, a savage place-but what was savage, I adored, she tells us. And so these poems are full of the deepest kind of heartbreak, too, the kind of heartbreak that's irreparable. Death cures of our terror of death, Tyler writes, What cure is there for the terror of love In My Florida, a hubcap scuds across the road, a child hides under an ironing board while her mother is beaten, a heron with orange eyes feasts on hatchling alligators, and a girl swings a bag of snakes tied with a pink, satiny ribbon, asking, Oh, whose porch can I leave it on Tyler's poems are often shocking, always brave, and bravely, shockingly beautiful.
