And whilst the lead players are fashion-conscious teenage hedonists - wrapped up in themselves, their music, their dancing and their reputation in the Mod world - that doesn't define what kind of people they are, their virtue. Jimmy is going down to Brighton with some friends from South London. It's a simple enough trip. A chance to look good, meet lots of other good-looking people and have fun. But for him it is destined to be a philosophical journey. An exploration of his character; of his ability to do the right thing by the right people. Why? For two reasons. How they justified their present. And how they reconciled their free - and somewhat selfish - lives with those of their parents. The second reason only becomes clear in the penultimate chapter, although the story becomes strangely unsettling before then....
