Excerpt: . . . Tennessee, and a classified mission assigned to Nashville. According to Air Force officials, ANG headquarters assigned the engineering missions to Ohio and Pennsylvania based on the ANG desire to distribute homeland defense assets regionally. In phases subsequent to the development of the banded list, flying missions were assigned with direct involvement of senior leadership from the Air Force, the National Guard Bureau, and ANG. Throughout the process to replace missions for affected ANG units there was an effort to assign replacement flying missions to the greatest extent possible. According to ANG officials, if any flying missions became available, ANG headquarters would match those missions to units instead of other missions on the banded list. The replacement flying missions are the joint 17 cargo aircraft, a B-2 association with an active wing, and an F-16 foreign military sales training mission. The joint cargo aircraft mission was assigned to ANG units at Bradley, Connecticut; Kellogg, Michigan; Mansfield, Ohio; Key Field, Mississippi; and Nashville, Tennessee. According to ANG officials, Bradley received the joint cargo aircraft mission because it was in the only state that did not have a flying mission, while units in Michigan, Ohio, Mississippi, and Tennessee were selected based on the ANG desire to distribute homeland defense assets regionally. 18 Additionally, two of the five joint cargo aircraft mission assignments were made to units that currently fly the C-130, another airlift aircraft, and one assignment was made to a unit that currently flies the KC-135 tanker, which ANG headquarters officials believe will minimize transition costs. According to ANG officials, the Air Combat Command identified the potential for the ANG unit in...
