Excerpt from Influence of Gin and Lint Cleaner Combinations and Mill Cleaning on Dust Levels and Yarn Quality of Acala Cotton Dust levels appear to be influenced by the trash content in lint, increasing as the trash content increases. Cultural, harvesting, and ginning practices and varietal characteristics affect trash levels and, therefore, dust levels to varying degrees. The dust level in cotton can be reduced significantly by using lint cleaners at the gin.² The competitive position of cotton could be enhanced by determining the optimum combination of gin conditioning and cleaning machinery for processing cotton harvested by different methods and containing different quantities of moisture and trash in order to obtain a bale with a minimum amount of dust. Lowered dust potential in the bale would help the textile mill maintain dust levels within osha standards. However, gin-processing systems designed to reduce dust levels must not seriously affect fiber and yarn quality. Other wise, the benefits of reduced dust levels will be offset by a reduction in yarn quality and Spinning performance. The objective of this study was to determine the effect of gin and lint cleaner combinations and mill-cleaning levels on card-room dust levels and on fiber and yarn quality of Acala cotton.
