THE MYSTERY BEHIND GRANDPAS CHAIR

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 118 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.0in. x 0.3in. It all started on the day that my mum came home from my school parents evening. Steam was swiftly coming out of her ears, like a pressure cooker ready to explode. I really thought that at any minute she would take off. I began reciting in my head ten, nine, eight, seven, six. I never did reach blast off before she began ranting at me again. It turns out that my dull and boring History teacher, Mr Butler had slated me, saying that I always messed around in his class. Well I did to be honest I hated history. It was one of my worst subjects. I could not understand why we needed to learn about the past. The future was what was important, that was what we were always told. Grownups always seemed to contradict themselves and it did my head in. No wonder we kids were almost always confused! The worst thing was that Mr Butler told my mum about the assignment I was supposed to be working on. It was: A day in the life of a person living through world war two We were all then to present our work to the class after Christmas. I hadn't started mine and it was November. In fact I was going to make some excuse like my writing arm was playing up or my computer had blown up and left us all in shock so I was unable to do any homework! Now I would have Mum on my back too! You really need to take an interest in history my mum had said, banging the dinner pots into the cupboard after they had...
