Excerpt from Prose and Verse To worthily and adequately characterize my Mother is beyond my power, for I am but the decimal that is a point between the fractions of her greatness. How can her mind, her heart, her soul, be comprehended by my part of her Nature endowed her richly with all her favoritism could give; an expression of exceeding tenderness, a fascinating charm and grace of form, a lithe and graceful motion full of energetic power. Her laugh came freely from the heart, from her sympathy she freely gave you of her tears; and while she had great power of wit, she oftener employed the gentler humor. Her heart was like the bosom of a lake upon which played the shadow and the sun. Her keenest sorrow was another's pain; she suffered sorely from her borrowed griefs - her own endured with woman's fortitude. She gave of her love as the ocean gives up to the sun for plenteous rain, the which descending, it returned to her. Her husband was her hero, and her ardent lover all her days. Her sprightliness of mind drew quick response from his fine spontaneity. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
