Excerpt from A Soldier of the Legion There he stood, this show young man, well-groomed and smart in his full-dress uniform of second lieutenant of cavalry, the stripes and splashes of yellow suiting his dark skin: a slim, erect figure, not very tall, but a soldier every inch Of him, though the wide-apart blue eyes gave the square-chinned face a boyish air Of wistfulness, even when he smiled his delightfully childlike, charming smile. Girls glanced at him as they swung past in their partners arms, noticing how tense was the look on the brown face, and how the straight eyebrows even blacker than the smooth dark hair were drawn together in expectant concentration. Suddenly the door Opened. The curtain-raiser was over. The drama of the evening was about to begin. It seemed wonderful that the band could keep presence of mind to go on playing the Merry Widow, instead of stopping short with a gasp and crash of instruments, to start again with the Tango Trance, her dance in Girls Love.
