In the meantime, we, as teachers, convinced of the necessity, will strive to do part of the work, the results of which will, in time, produce a favorable impression. Probably the main reason for this paper is to bring to the attention of teachers a few plans which may be used to start the systematic movement. This part of the discussion shall be mainly from the high school view point. True to our American custom, when anything is to be undertaken, the first step is the creation of a committee; for everybody s business is nobody s business. This vocational guidance committee should plan and organize different methods. The first great task, especially if it is a large city high school, is to conduct a campaign of education, among the pupils of the eighth grade, as well as among the parents and teachers, in order that an understanding of the courses of study may ensue. Pamphlets embodying complete details may be distributed. In our city the teachers of one of the high schools invited the parents and teachers of these pupils to spend an evening at the school. A short program was given by local talent, followed by two very instructive talks on high school courses. The school was then thrown open for inspection. The most...
